DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments filed 10/10/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that Oh does not discuss stopping the motor. Examiner feels that the important and pertinent teaching of Oh is, as the applicant states, "If rotational speed of the inner tub is changed, interaction between these forces is changed. That is, even if the sprayed water hits at the same position of laundry, a path of the water...can be changed." Thus, examiner feels that it is obvious to modify Orszulik and change the speed of the drum, to allow water to leave the drum through different paths and create a more thorough rinse. Examiner asserts that there are two obvious ways the speed can change. It can either increase, or decrease. Examiner further asserts that there are a limited number of ways to decrease the speed of the drum. One can output less energy from the motor, shut off the motor completely, or apply a breaking force. All are considered to be obvious to one skilled in the art. So although Oh does not teach specifically stopping the motor, one skilled in the art knows that stopping the motor would cause an obvious decrease in speed and, according to Oh, cause the water to take a different path through the clothes, thereby rendering the instant claims obvious.
